Corbett first incumbent gov to lose re-election

Pennsylvania. Tom Wolf was elected as the 47th Governor of Pennsylvania on Tuesday night.

Tom Wolf's campaign Twitter page tweeted this photo out of Wolf and his family shortly after the polls closed. / TWITTER

A Tom was elected Governor of Pennsylvania on Tuesday.

But he didn't have the last name Corbett.

Tom Wolf became the first candidate in modern state election history to defeat an incumbent in the race for the state's highest office. Wolf, a Democrat from York, defeated Corbett in a landslide, according to unofficial election results.

In a letter emailed out to his supporters, Wolf wrote that "As your governor, I'll be there working with you, and I can't wait to see what we do together to help give Pennsylvania a fresh start."

Regarding his opponent: "Governor Tom Corbett, Lt. Governor Jim Cawley, and their many supporters deserve our respect and admiration for running a campaign focused on the issues," he wrote.

Visit Metro.us for more election coverage and updated results.

As of press time, Wolf had about 64 percent of the vote, unofficial results show. Corbett, who twice served as the state's attorney general, had roughly 35 percent of the votes, with 19 statewide districts reporting.

For Wolf, a businessman and former teacher, this was his first run at a public office. He will be sworn in as the 47th governor of the state in January 2015.

Other PA races

There weren't many surprises in other local elections:

- Democratic US Rep. Bob Brady, longtime chairman of the Philadelphia Democratic Party, won re-election in the 1st Congressional district.
- Democratic US Rep. Chaka Fattah, who is currently under a federal corruption investigation, won re-election in the 2nd Congressional District.
- Democratic State Rep. Brendan Boyle won out in 13th Congressional District and graduated to the US House of Representatives. Boyle replaces Allison Schwartz, who withdrew her seat to run for governor, but lost to Wolf in the primary.

Who did you vote for and why?

Wolf.
"Corbett has done an awful job as far as schools. ... I would be willing to pay more taxes if it was going to schools."
Myra Adams

Wolf.
"With natural gas, Corbett seems to not really know what he's doing. He's not imposing any excise tax."
Doug Goetz

Corbett.
"It's beyond an uphill battle. ... I don't want a politician as governor."
Steve Nasevich, Republican 14th Ward leader

Massive support for Wolf at polls

Voters at the polls Tuesday were overwhelmingly in support of Democratic candidate Tom Wolf, with almost nothing positive to say about incumbent Gov. Tom Corbett.

"We are done with Tom Corbett," said Rod Clay, getting ready to vote in Brewerytown. "Every time you turn around, he's shutting down a program, a service, a school."

Most voters named schools as the most important political issue.

"I thought Corbett wasn't doing his job. When our schools are disrupted the way they are, you need to get him out of office," said Shirley Easter.

"I'm sick of the things the Republicans have done," said Margot Robinson. "A lot of that is on us. You've got to go out and vote."

But others questioned whether Wolf will change anything in Harrisburg.

"I hope he gets in office, but once he's in office, are we seeing a difference? Or is it gonna be the same old thing with a different face?" asked Michael Artist. "I won't stop voting ... but I question how much the public really influences the vote." SAM NEWHOUSE

Election Day

One public school teacher voted for Wolf "to protect her job." A woman on public assistance said she voted for Wolf "to get a job."

- "I have a lot of issues with how Corbett is running the state —just a lot of the things he stands for," said Corinda Cook, in Brewerytown.

Abductor used victim's ATM card, police say

Maryland. The family of missing woman Carlesha Freeland-Gaither is pleading for her safe return home.

The search for the 22-year-old woman who was abducted in Germantown on Sunday night has stretched into Maryland.

Police said Tuesday that Carlesha Freeland-Gaither's ATM card was used at a bank in Aberdeen, Maryland, at 6:01 a.m. Tuesday, but they couldn't say if she was with the abductor.

According to NBC10, the person who withdrew funds from her account resembled the description of Freeland-Gaither's abductor, who can be seen on surveillance video violently forcing the nurse's aid into a running, metallic gray Ford Taurus just before 10 p.m. Sunday only blocks from her Northwest Philadelphia home.

Freeland-Gaither's family spoke out Tuesday in a public plea for her abductor to return their loved one.

Keisha Gaither, the woman's mother, tearfully pleaded to the news media: "Just give her back," she said. "Please."

Freeland-Gaither, who lives on West Hansberry Street, does have history in the Old Line State. She attended high school in Maryland and for several years lived with her grandmother, according to the news outlet.

She returned to Philadelphia in 2012 and has worked since with cancer patients at Penn Presbyterian Hospital in University City, according to NBC10.

The FBI has partnered with local authorities on the search and has also donated money to help the cause. A combined $42,000 reward is on the table for information that leads to the arrest and conviction of her abductor.

Police described the attacker as a 5-foot-10-inch tall man with a medium build.

Anyone with information is asked to call 215.686.TIPS.

Fourth sharp object found in local candy

South Jersey. A Vineland child allegedly found a razor blade in Halloween candy.

A South Jersey child reportedly discovered a razor blade inside a wrapped Tootsie Roll they collected while trick-or-treating, reports say. It's the fourth such incident in the area since Halloween.

"The candy was collected in East Vineland in the neighborhoods off of Spring Road and Pennsylvania Ave," Vineland police said.

In nearby Manchester Township, a parent reportedly discovered a tooth-pick in a Tootsie Roll their child collected while trick-or-treating in the Pine Lake Park neighborhood, police said. The parent found it after biting into the candy.

In Lower Macungie, a girl found a pin stuck inside an unidentified piece of candy after trick-or-treating in the Ancient Oaks neighborhood, the Morning Call reported.

Lastly, in Towamencin Township, Montgomery County, a child reportedly discovered a razor inside an unidentified piece of candy on Saturday, after trick-or-treating near Woodlawn Drive and Walnut Lane.

GOP strikes early blow in elections

Obama. The White House tried to play down the prospect of sharp changes in strategy after the election.

A voter gestures as Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) votes in the midterm elections at Bellarmine University in Louisville, Kentucky. / GETTY IMAGES

Republicans struck a powerful first blow in Kentucky in congressional elections on Tuesday in their drive to control the U.S. Senate and dramatically tip the balance of power away from President Barack Obama and his Democrats.

Obama's low job approval rating, partisan gridlock in Washington and an economy that is not growing broadly enough to help many in the middle class were major issues confronting voters in elections for 36 senators, 36 state governors and all 435 members of the House of Representatives.

At press time, Reuters/Ipsos projected Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell won his re-election battle, defeating Democrat Alison Lundergan Grimes in a race that had been extremely close until McConnell pulled away in the polls in recent days.

If Republicans went on to win the Senate on Tuesday, McConnell would replace Democrat Harry Reid as Senate majority leader, putting him in a powerful position on Capitol Hill.

Republicans also gained their first seat from Democrats when Shelley Moore Capito easily defeated Natalie Tennant to win a Senate seat in West Virginia left open by retiring Democratic Senator Jay Rockefeller.

Republicans were expected to pick up seats in the Senate, but polls ahead of the voting showed eight to 10 races were still toss-ups as of press time.

They needed to gain six seats to control the chamber for the first time since 2006.

Vikings' Peterson reaches plea deal, avoids jail

Minnesota Vikings running back Adrian Peterson has reached a plea deal to charges of abusing his 4-year-old son that would see him avoid any jail time, media reports said on Tuesday.

Peterson was scheduled to appear in a Texas court on Tuesday to face a child abuse charge for striking his son with a thin tree branch as a form of punishment, leaving the child bruised.

Under the deal Peterson will plead no contest to one count of misdemeanor reckless assault, which will not include reference to domestic violence or violence to a minor.

Catholic Church official condemns woman's suicide

Vatican. Brittany Maynard, 29, had become the face of the right-to-die movement.

A Vatican bioethics official on Tuesday condemned the death by assisted suicide of Brittany Maynard, a terminally ill 29-year-old who ended her life over the weekend, as an undignified "absurdity."

"This woman (took her own life) thinking she would die with dignity, but this is the error," Monsignor Ignacio Carrasco de Paula, head of the Pontifical Academy for Life, told the Italian news agency Ansa.

Maynard, who was diagnosed in January with a brain tumor and had announced plans to take medication to die when her pain became unbearable, had become the face of the right-to-die movement ahead of her death.

Jolie 'open' to pursuing life in politics

Academy Award-winning actress Angelina Jolie is "open" to pursuing a life in politics, diplomacy or public service, she told Vanity Fair magazine.

Jolie, who won a Best Supporting Actress Oscar for her role in "Girl, Interrupted," has already turned her hand to directing. Her latest film behind the camera, "Unbroken," about Olympic runner, World War II airman and prisoner of war Louis Zamperini, is set to open on Dec. 25.

The wife of actor Brad Pitt and a special envoy to the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) said that her work as a humanitarian has made her conscious of the fact that politics have to be considered as an option.

"Because if you really want to make an extreme change, then you have a responsibility," she told the magazine in an excerpt from an interview published online on Tuesday.

"But I honestly don't know in what role I would be more useful — I am conscious of what I do for a living, and that (could) make it less possible."

Asked if she sees herself in politics, diplomacy or public service, she replied, "I am open." REUTERS

Forbes. Beyonce the highest paid woman in music for 2014

With estimated earnings of $115 million, more than double what she pulled in last year, Beyonce is the highest paid woman in music in 2014, Forbes magazine said on Tuesday.

The huge sum, most of which came from her world tour, propelled Beyonce, 33, from fourth place last year and put her firmly ahead of pop star Taylor Swift, 24, with $64 million, who jumped up one spot from last year to No. 2.

Pop singer Pink, 35, climbed up from No. 8 in 2013 to third with $52 million.

The R&B singer's self-titled album released last December and endorsement deals pushed her earnings up further assuring her the top spot.

Barbados-born Rihanna, 26, with $48 million and Katy Perry, 30, who earned an estimated $40 million, rounded out the top five on the annual list.

Madonna, 56, who ranked No. 1 last year, failed to make the top 10 in 2014. Lady Gaga, 28, slumped from No. 2 in 2013 to ninth place this year with estimated earnings of $33 million.

Forbes compiled the list after estimating pretax income calculated for the 12 months from June 2013 to 2014 based on record sales, concert tickets, touring information merchandise sales and interviews with concert promoters, lawyers and managers.

It also looked at data from the Pollstar, the RIAA (Recording Industry Association of America) and tracking firm Nielsen SoundScan. REUTERS

Safety. Shipping lines apply 'Ebola clause' to fend off virus risks

Ebola clauses are being adopted by ship owners. / GETTY IMAGES

As Ebola persists in West Africa, shipping lines and traders are tweaking their contracts to protect themselves if the disease puts crews at risk of infection or prevents vessels calling at affected ports.

Ebola has not yet forced ports to close, but uncertainties about the spread of the virus are adding to legal and financial concerns for those involved in shipping oil, cocoa and minerals from the region.

Iron ore miners have already been hit by logistics problems exacerbated by the Ebola outbreak.

"Ebola clauses have now become a very common phenomenon," said a senior freight manager with a leading commodities trader.

Shipping lines active in West Africa, such as oil tanker firm Stena Weco, have written clauses into their contracts requiring charterers to nominate alternative safe discharge ports if Ebola means they cannot call at the intended port, according to a contract seen by Reuters. REUTERS

Prosecutors appeal Pistorius verdict and sentence

The South African prosecution authority confirmed on Tuesday it would file an appeal against the culpable homicide verdict and five-year jail sentence handed down to paralympian Oscar Pistorius last month.

Pistorius was absolved of the murder of his girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp at the end of the trial after the state failed to convince judge Thokozile Masipa of Pistorius' intent to kill, leading to a conviction for negligent killing and a five-year jail term.

"Today, we announce that the NPA will file the application for leave to appeal both the conviction and sentence," the National Prosecuting Authority said in a statement on Tuesday. REUTERS

RIHANNA'S MOST SHOCKING ACT YET
THE BEST SKIN CREAM ON EARTH?

Rihanna graces the cover of Elle magazine for the fourth time for its December issue. She sat down with the magazine for a Q&A session full of evidence that Rihanna truly is the Ernest Hemingway of pop stars, using two words where someone like Miley Cyrus would probably use 12. But even with such brevity, her answers are illuminating — terrified of childbirth, loves Michael Bolton's "Greatest Hits." Here are some of her more memorable sound bites.

The answer we don't really believe:
Elle: What do people misunderstand about you?
Rihanna: I'm shy.

The answer that's not such a huge surprise:
Elle: What's your mantra?
Rihanna: "F— bitches, get money!"

The answer that solidifies her geek cred:
Elle: The last time you were star-struck?
Rihanna: When I met Aaron Paul at the Spike awards.

Most unintentionally cringe-inducing answer:
Elle: If you were a piece of jewelry, what would it be?
Rihanna: I'd be a choker!

2 Aniston's look for new film is a piece of 'Cake'

GETTY IMAGES

In her new indie film, "Cake," Jennifer Aniston got a make-under, dressing down with no makeup and a drab haircut to play a car-crash survivor. And you know what? She loved it. Aniston found taking on the look "so dreamy and empowering and liberating," she said during a recent Deadline panel. There haven't been many "get her look!" posts connected to this.

3 Cyrus dating the son of the Governator?

Between the Beyonce album info leaks, Angelina Jolie considering political office and the Katy Perry-Taylor Swift feud, maybe we forgot to keep an eye on Miley Cyrus. Hey, it happens. So what's she been doing while the attention has been elsewhere? Snagging herself a Schwarzenegger. Cyrus is reportedly dating Patrick Schwarzenegger, son of the Governator and Maria Shriver, according to E! News. The new couple were seen together on a recent night out — as well as the next morning at Schwarzenegger's apartment. Ooooh! Apparently Schwarzenegger likes to play the long game, though. In a 2011 Details magazine profile, he said of his dating life, "My eye, though, is on Miley." This is either adorable or creepy. Or adorably creepy.

4 The new 'Hot Mug Shot Guy'

There's a new "Hot Mug Shot Guy" sweeping the Internet. Sean Kory was arrested at a Halloween parade in Santa Cruz, California, for assaulting a man dressed up as a Fox News reporter. Kory reportedly yelled, "I hate Fox News," grabbed the man's prop mic and rubbed it in his crotch then began pummelling the victim with a tennis racket, though police reports indicate the man was not injured. Even though we're featuring this item in the paper, don't confuse this as your calling to dethrone Kory.

5 It's the great pumpkin, Ariana Grande

More gifts? I'm good, thanks.
GETTY IMAGES

Sometimes a fan loves Ariana Grande so much that she has to call the cops on him. At least that was what happened when Tim Normandin, a 29-year-old man from Lowell, Massachusetts, didn't heed her record company's request that he stop sending Grande outlandish gifts, according to TMZ. Among the tokens of his affection? Eight Yankee Candle Company candles, calendars featuring puppies and kittens, a three-piece mirror set from Kmart, a $200 anklet from Kay Jewelers, a rock he picked up in New Hampshire's White Mountains and, best of all, a 42.5-pound pumpkin, which is apparently not the way to a pop star's heart after all. # 'Interstellar' needs to be seen on film

Movies. You really have to view this space-age film the old-fashioned way.

Wednesday marks a milestone: A film is being released on film. "Interstellar" hits theaters today — just not even close to all of them. That may seem odd, given that it's one of the most highly anticipated movies of the year: the latest from brainy blockbuster-maker Christopher Nolan, with Oscar winners Matthew McConaughey and Anne Hathaway.

Yet the only theaters getting it are the ones that never threw out their film projectors. Starting today, you can see "Interstellar" in good old-fashioned, grainy and dangerously combustible 35mm as well as supersize 70mm IMAX. The rest of the country's multiplexes — the ones that converted entirely to digital, which is nearly all of them — don't get it until Friday.

This bold move is a strong push-back against the digital wave that has almost entirely consumed modern movie watching. In 2010, most theaters switched — at great cost — to DCP (Digital Cinema Package), a purely computerized system. Instead of bulky, expensive-to-ship film reels, movies were mere files with a password to unlock. Unlike film, they would never scratch, rot or burn up. All a projectionist had to do was hit a button.

But the files could get corrupted or deleted. And while it's nice to have sparklingly clean images, they can be too bright. As Quentin Tarantino — like Nolan, another celluloid zealot — once put it, digital projection is like "watching television in public."

"Interstellar" indeed looks great on 70mm. The film is about McConaughey and Hathaway searching through the cosmos for a planet to replace the dying Earth, and its early scenes on Earth are sometimes impossibly dark.

But once it gets to space, you can not only see the majesty, but feel it. None of it looks digital, not even the planets our heroes visit.

Nolan shot one of them in Iceland, and it really does resemble an alien land. Beyond that, it even looks real. It looks like film.

By the numbers

249

There are 249 remaining theaters in the nation that can show 35mm and 70mm film.

Interview. Author Joe Hill

"Horns" tells the story of Ig, who wakes up one morning with a pair of horns growing out of his head. Lucky for him, the horns inspire people around him to share their secrets, which helps in his quest to solve the murder of his girlfriend. And lucky for Joe Hill, the author of the book it's based on (and son of horror maestro Stephen King), Daniel Radcliffe was up to the challenge of making it all feel real in the movie adaptation.

What did you think of Daniel as Ig?

I think he's amazing. I just think he's great. … What he actually brought to the screen was wildly beyond my deepest hopes. I think that he is what is most exciting about the film, by far. The whole thing is anchored by his emotional

Nolan isn't the only prestigious member of the film club

Christopher Nolan isn't the only one still holding the torch for celluloid. Quentin Tarantino will be releasing 70mm prints of his next film, "The Hateful Eight." Two years ago Paul Thomas Anderson's "The Master" was shipped out in 70mm prints, and his new "Inherent Vice" played the New York Film Festival on 35mm. Others include Wes Anderson, Rian Johnson ("Looper") and Alex Ross Perry ("Listen Up Philip").

What were you interested in seeing adapted well?
I wanted to see the breakup. I wanted to see both the sweetness that comes with a young first love … and also the emotional wreckage that a person feels when it all comes apart. We have lots of pyrotechnics … but I think that the great special effect in the film is the breakup scene.

Did you like the horns?
I got to wear them! I was on set for a few days and the special effects crew was trying their third stage horns and they needed someone to put them on, so they sat me down in the makeup chair and put them on. They're the kind of accessory that look good with anything. You can have a T-shirt and jeans, but you can also dress up in a suit and look good.

LISA WEIDENFELD

Bonus question

Did you end up asking your dad what he thought of the movie?
I loved what I was seeing, but I wasn't sure how well it worked and I sent a copy to my dad and he looked at it and he said, "This is great; this is a lot of fun." And again, I kind of felt like, OK, we didn't screw up.

Stress-free living

Forget PowerBars — did you know that you get energy from your home? Christa O'Leary, author of "Home in Harmony: Designing an Inspired Life," utilizes her background in psychology and interior design to transform your over-cluttered digs into a sanctuary.

MOLLY CONGDON

Clear clutter

When you walk through the door after a long day, do you feel relief or do you feel stressed because you have yet to go through the magazines that are scattered across the floor? "The first thing to do within your home is to take care of the clutter, because it weighs on our unconscious mind," says O'Leary. "Go through those cluttered spaces and start there. You want your home to nurture you, not drain your energy."

Shop wisely

"All of the products you bring into your home have a direct impact on the function of your body and your vitality and vibrancy," says O'Leary. "Even the cleaning products you're using have a direct impact on your health." Because of this, she suggests going for organic and natural cleaners.

Turn off your autopilot

Are you guilty of not making your bed? If running out of the house with sheets scattered is something you've become accustomed to, it's time to make a conscious change. "People don't realize this, but 80 percent of our daily actions are done out of habit," O'Leary says. "Being aware of this is key. In order to see some changes you have to replace [bad habits] with beneficial ones, which will inspire better living."

PLUS

Tip

Choose paint carefully

Wall color could impact your mood. "Red increases our energy level and it and makes you hungry," O'Leary explains. "So if you are trying to lose weight, it's the worst color to paint your kitchen." Find the tones that work for you, she recommends.

Apps and gadgets for the kitchen

Ugh, cooking — the bane of busy millennials everywhere. Between pinging away on a smartphone or social media and working long hours for peanuts in a post-recession economy, young urbanites have little time or patience to whip up an elaborate meal. Fret not, help is at hand with these nifty apps and gadgets that are perfect for the tech-obsessed young professional who can't boil an egg. WANISE MARTINEZ, MWN

5 Get smart with the iPad stand

The Williams-Sonoma Smart Tools for iPad Sets is the cuisine-keen technophile's winning trifecta: It serves as a nifty stand for reading recipes on your iPad, cranks out tunes via its Bluetooth speaker and keeps your tablet spill-free with a removable screen shield. $199.95

2 The 0452 digital scale perfects portions

The Perfect Portions 0452's intelligent food scale displays the nutritional facts of the food on your plate. The gadget also shows the daily totals you need for calories, carbs, sugars and fats. Designed in an easy-to-clean format, the scale has a glass-top surface and touchpad keys to make for easier use. $39.99

3 Cooking time is made 'Real Simple'

Most nights, the last thing on your mind is cooking dinner after a long day at work. But with the Real Simple app, you'll have access to plenty of quick meals that take 40 minutes or fewer to prepare. New recipes are fed into the app every month. The app has a kitchen timer to help you stay on track additional tips and nutritional info, as well as an upgraded version (99 cents per month) that offers more than 900 recipes. Available for iOS and Android.

4 What an intelligent pot

The Crock-Pot Slow Cooker works with smart cook technology to solve all your problems with the oven. Just put all the necessary ingredients in, select your "Ready At" time and your protein type, and it starts doing your job for you. More good news: The removable stoneware means you won't need another set of serving dishes, which also means fewer things to clean up! The pots come in different models to suit your needs. $59.99

5 Feel 'appy' with Green Kitchen

Organic and vegetarian meals that are also easy to prepare? The Green Kitchen app makes this possible. It instructs you how to whip up 102 recipes using whole grains and seeds, healthy fats and unrefined sugars. Available for iOS.

Addicted to your phone? There's an app for that

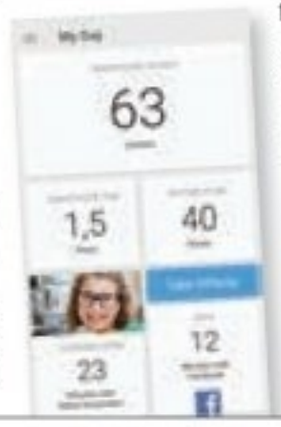
Focus. Offtime gets to know what you do on your phone, then shuts it down (for a while).

Remember paying attention to the people you're actually with? Do that! / GETTY IMAGES

Gadget addicts know this too well: No amount of willpower will ever get our prying eyes and hyperactive thumbs away from our smartphone screens. So how about an app that will break the cycle for us?

Offtime blocks certain phone features such as email, texts or social media for set periods of time. But it doesn't block everything or pick random apps to lock down.

"It shows which activities and apps are used often and with which contacts you interact the most," says Michael Dettbarn, co-founder of the Berlin-based developer.



"Considering we can't imagine our everyday lives without our mobile devices anymore, the question is not IF we should use our smartphone but rather HOW."

Besides the obnoxious habit of paying as much, if not more, attention to our phones even when there is a real friend or colleague sitting across from us, Dettbarn says devices are reorganizing our priorities — and we don't even know it.

"The way we're using apps and communication on our phones today is not obvious, and it's causing emotional and psychological pressure on a subconscious level," he says. "We're losing more and more focus and can't differentiate between the bits of information and the kinds of functionality that really matter to us."

You can still choose people whose messages will be allowed through, but the idea is to refocus your attention on tasks at hand. Intuitive analytics track your app usage, showing you what you're doing, when you're doing it and how long you're doing it.

Offtime is free, though currently only available for Android devices. Visit www.offtime.co.

Pedestrians aggravated by cyclists

Re: 'Oppression against cyclists is great travesty of our age' (Metro, Nov. 4) Lawless cyclists should be targeted by police over pedestrians because bicycles are vehicles that regularly travel over the speed limit set by the city. "Lawless" pedestrians don't do the same. Jaywalking pedestrians are not going to crush another human being the way cyclists so often do.
AMY BALDWIN, VIA EMAIL

It's bad enough that I have to get cut off almost daily by cyclists (while in a crosswalk no less), but now I have to read about their "oppression" in Metro. Get a grip, Jack — cyclists are going 10 to 15 miles an hour, while pedestrians are going about 2 to 3 mph. We're just trying to get to work without getting hit by a car or bike. I don't have an issue outside of the city, but while trying to commute, cyclists are just a nuisance!
M. DISCOLO, VIA EMAIL

Pedestrians are usually not bad or lawless but are too often distracted by electronic devices. If someone is walking and talking using an earphone while eating something and slurping a beverage, how can they be expected to pay attention to traffic?
GEORGE CHRISTIAN JR., VIA EMAIL

Winless wonders

Sixers host Magic

With an 0-4 record now after a loss to the undefeated Rockets Monday, the 76ers have a good chance to earn win No. 1 vs. the Magic at home at 7 p.m. Wednesday. Nerlens Noel's defense has been impressive thus far — he's averaged two steals and two blocks per game.

Sanchez the latest backup to take over

NFL. Mark Sanchez wouldn't be the first Eagles backup to lead the team to the playoffs.

It's pretty rare in the NFL for a team to start the same quarterback for all 16 games.

Even the Eagles, who have had a relative level of stability at the position since the Donovan McNabb era began, will have had 11 different starters since 1999 when Mark Sanchez suits up in Week 10.

The team hasn't had a full 16-game season from a quarterback since 2008 (when the Eagles fell to the Cardinals in the NFC title game).

So Sanchez's ascension to the starting gig certainly comes as no surprise. It is much more likely for a team to require some help from the quarterback position than not.

"I feel great about Mark," Chip Kelly said. "We felt great about him all along. One of the things we wanted to do — I always said we needed two quarterbacks and had a chance to get him in here. I thought he's done a great job in our system. I thought he played outstanding in the preseason and showed no rust or anything when he got in there against Houston [on Sunday]."

Quoted

"Mark is a little bit further and is more advanced because of his experience with the Jets."

Chip Kelly, head coach, comparing Sanchez to Nick Foles

Since McNabb's trade to the Redskins six years ago, the Birds have had Kevin Kolb, (seven starts), Vince Young (three), Michael Vick (34) and Nick Foles (16) under center.

And it seems not to have hurt the team much. The Birds won a playoff game with Jeff Garcia calling the shots in 2006, and have reached the playoffs under Vick's and Foles' leadership.

The Sanchez-led Eagles making a playoff run would not be an unusual phenomenon. The one-time Jets bona fide QB-1 took the Jets to two AFC title games, and he's been ready to go since Day 1.

"His preparation, I think, is just outstanding in terms of what he does here," Kelly said. "And he prepared himself like he's the starter."

Sanchez is 4-2 all-time in postseason play. / GETTY IMAGES

Offseason taking shape for Phillies

MLB. The Phillies are expected to be very busy with roster moves this winter.

The Phillies could make a complete overhaul to their roster this offseason.

Rumors have already begun to swirl about several players being traded or released and many sources claim that every Phillie is on the table.

Rumored to be the first to move is, surprisingly, outfielder Marlon Byrd.

Byrd had a very solid season in right field for the Phillies, combining power and solid defensive play. His biggest knock is his strikeout total, among the worst in baseball. But FoxSports' Ken Rosenthal said Monday night he is a popular target.

Another subject of discussion on the Internet, and supposedly in front offices is the future or Ryan Howard.

The former MVP could very well be on his way out. Here's what ESPN's Buster Olney said Tuesday:

"Ryan Howard has had his last at-bat as a member of the Philadelphia Phillies. That's what the Phillies hope, anyway. That's their goal, according to rival executives."

Olney goes on to explain that the Howard situation isn't as cut and dry as the Phillies would like.

The 34-year-old (who turns 35 this month) is due $60 million, salaries for the next two seasons plus a $10 million buyout in 2017 (on a team option worth $23 million).

How they could move Howard without eating most of his salary is still the big question.

Don't be surprised if those two names are thrown around as the Winter Meetings approach on Dec. 7.

Pitchers for sale

With A.J. Burnett out the door the Phillies need a starter. Here's a couple guys they should target.

- Justin Masterson: He's about to turn 30 and is due to bounce back from a down year.
- Gavin Floyd: He was a Phillie once, but that never stopped Ruben Amaro before. In nine 2014 starts his ERA was 2.65 in Atlanta.

Bye bye Burnett

Burnett turns down $12.75 million from Phillies

With an opportunity to make a pretty hefty salary — especially considering he's 37 years old — A.J. Burnett scorned the prospect of being a part of the worst team in the NL East for the 2015 season.

A.J. Burnett / GETTY IMAGES

Burnett becomes a free agent and likely won't pitch unless he can get a deal with a contender.

Burnett was 8-18 last season with a 4.59 ERA. He led all of baseball in earned runs, walks and losses.

Prior to signing his one-year, $16 million deal (with a player option for season No. 2), Burnett had a late-career resurgence in Pittsburgh.

His stellar pitching in 2012 and 2013 for the Pirates made him appear like a perfect fit for the Phillies as a No. 3 or 4 starter, but his departure was expected leading up to Tuesday.

The Phillies now have a little more wiggle room with their payroll.

NFL power rankings | by Matt Burke

No. 1

Patriots (7-2)

No team in the NFL was beating that Patriots team that played late Sunday afternoon at Gillette Stadium. Darrelle Revis and Brandon Browner give the Pats, arguably, the best pass defense in the pass-happy NFL and Tom Brady and Rob Gronkowski are the most dangerous quarterback-tight end combo in the league since 2011's Tom Brady and Rob Gronkowski.

No. 2

Cardinals (7-1)

One reason why they're behind the Pats: Their lone loss this season came to the Broncos, the team the Pats blew out on Sunday.

No. 3

Broncos (6-2)

The best part of every season for Peyton Manning since the turn of the century has been the game after he had to deal with a Bill Belichick defense.

No. 4

Eagles (6-2)

Losing your starting quarterback in the first quarter and winning a road game against a quality foe falls into the category of "dealing well with adversity."

No. 5

Lions (6-2)

Ask an average sports fan on the street what the Lions record is right now and nine times out of 10 you'll get "4-4." They've played just one stinker this season (loss to Carolina).

No. 6

Seahawks (5-3)

The Seahawks were on the verge of blowing out the winless Raiders on Sunday, leading 24-3 at the half. They wound up winning the game by six points.

No. 7

Colts (6-3)

We now know that the Steelers are at least a solid football team, so the Colts' blowout loss to them in Week 8 wasn't as bad as it seemed.

No. 8

Steelers (6-3)

Before we go nuts with the Steelers love, let's remember that their three-game win streak is due in part to the fact that they were all at home.

No. 9

Packers (5-3)

Heading into the season, people were speculating that running back Eddie Lacy could very well lead the league in fantasy points. He has just one 100-plus yard rushing day.

No. 10

Cowboys (6-3)

Jerry Jones wants Tony Romo to play in London so badly Sunday against the Jaguars that he "jokingly" offered up his wife's first-class seat on the plane.

No. 11

Chiefs (5-3)

Alex Smith's line in the Chiefs' 24-10 victory over the Jets on Sunday was perfectly Alex Smith: 21-of-31 for 199 yards, two TDs and no interceptions.

No. 12

Dolphins (5-3)

They put 37 points on the board against San Diego last Sunday. The offense is improving. The defense has been tremendous all year.

No. 13

Bills (5-3)

Only the Patriots have scored over 23 points against the Bills this season. Coming off a bye, they can get an early lead in the AFC wild card race with a win against K.C.

No. 14

Chargers (5-4)

Wow, was that shutout by the Dolphins alarming. The Chargers are doing the opposite of their old hallmark — peaking too soon instead of too late.

Sixers legend Cunningham optimistic about rebuilding

NBA. Sixers coaching legend Billy Cunningham sees the light at the end of the tunnel.

Billy Cunningham was the last 76ers coach to ride on a float down Broad Street.

Do the math.

It was way back in 1983.

Cunningham attended the Sixers' home-opener Saturday night, which turned out to be a 114-96 loss to the Miami Heat. The Sixers are a long way from the glory days of '83.

Following a 19-63 season, the Sixers are off to an 0-4 start while featuring the youngest roster in the entire league. So there will be plenty more growing pains throughout this 2014-15 season.

Cunningham doesn't enjoy watching his former team lose so often.

"Hopefully, the two big kids [Nerlens Noel and Joel Embiid] will be healthy through their careers, and they won't have chronic injuries where they are out an extended period of time," Cunningham said.

In the meantime, the Sixers are busy acquiring assets and building through the draft. But it may be a while before they're back competing in the playoffs.

The 1982-83 team coached by Cunningham was star-driven with Julius Erving, Moses Malone, Maurice Cheeks, Andrew Toney and Bobby Jones.

Cunningham is a Hall-of-Fame player and coach. / GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

"I'll tell you what, I tip my hat that they have the fortitude to try it. I don't think I would have." Cunningham

Cunningham also has experience building a team from the very beginning as he did with the Heat as a minority owner.

In their first season, the Heat won only 15 games.

"First of all you have to find a star, like a Julius Erving or Moses Malone," Cunningham said about putting a team together. "Then you have to find people that complement them, so this is a long process. It is not going to be just the draft. It will be with free agents and maybe some trades. It is not easy."

No matter what happens, Cunningham will always be tied to the Sixers.

"I have been working with Scott O'Neil and Tim McDermott with regards to the Wilt Chamberlain Foundation," Cunningham said. "Hopefully the 76ers will be taking over the Wilt Chamberlain Foundation and growing it into something bigger and better than it is today."
